

GREG McANULTY
PRESIDENT, AIPIO (2009 – Present)

Greg McAnulty is based in Canberra and has over 25 year's business experience in Europe, Middle East, Africa and Australia. Greg's background is predominantly Information Technology and business centric both in Government and the commercial world.

Greg is a member of:

- Australian Information Industry Association (AIIA)
- Committee for Economic Development (CEDA)
- Australian Institute of Professional Intelligence Officers (AIPO)
- Australian Business Limited (ABL)
- Society of Industry Leaders – (USA)
- Australian Strategic Policy Institute (ASPI)

Greg's experience includes active involvement in various policy taskforces to lobby the Australian Government around specific issues (privacy, ecommerce treaties etc). Greg also worked with the Government to implement a Government Security Program that engages corporations to assist Government (and its interests) in protection from Cyber threats.

Greg returned in April of this year from Europe where he established the Intelligence and Defence practice for Microsoft. While in Europe Greg was actively involved in the eID (STORK) project across Europe as well as with NATO in a number of initiatives around humanitarian and disaster relief exercises. Greg was also involved in the resolution of "cyber" issues in the region.

Locally Greg has been involved with the Australian High Tech Crime Centre (AHTCC) around its CETS program (Child Exploitation Tracking System) as well as initiatives with the Centre for Infrastructure Protection NZ, Canadian Public Safety, CPNI UK, FBI and SOCA UK. These engagements have been through the participation in "CyberStorm" exercises which test's Australia's and other nations Critical Infrastructure against Cyber attack.
